New Horizon Fencing

Selected quality Whitewood raw material that is then kiln-dried, results in less shrinkage and twisting than pressure treated products. The wood is then subjected to treatment with a state of the art environmentally engineered formulation. The components of the treatment provide the following:

Anti-Decay agent - Designed to protect against wood rot, fungi and insect infestation, the Borate-based component effectively eliminates wood destroying fungi, such as wet and dry rot. It also serves as a strong deterrent to bug infestation, essentially attacking the digestive system of termites. Borate is a naturally occurring mineral that is relatively harmless to plants or mammals. (EPA Reg. #1624-39)

Pigmentation/UV Protection - By using iron oxide and natural pigments, the wood is protected against early deterioration and fading. The original wood appearance is preserved significantly longer than the traditional wood fence.

Water repellent - Designed to keep rainwater and moisture out and give New Horizon Fencing lasting beauty.

The water-based formula used in New Horizon Fencing contains no arsenic and requires no special safety precautions.

*For the Best Results - New Horizon fencing should be installed with a three-rail system. The top rail should be no more than 6" from the top and bottom rail should be no more than 6" from the bottom. Two rails can be used but bowing may occur.
